good news!

After a special meeting held last Monday night, the New Castle MSC has "identified a necessary change in their electric and water tariff" which now limits incorrect billing inquiries to three years. As a result of this change, the New Castle Little League electric bill has been reduced to $4,469., and MSC is allowing them three years to repay.

National Harriet Tubman Day
Saturday, March 11th

In conjunction with the grand opening celebration for the Harriet Tubman Visitor's Center Church Creek, Maryland, the Underground Railroad Coalition of Delaware will kick off commemorative programs on Saturday at the Delaware Historical Society and the Quaker Hill Historic Preservation Foundation, with the reading of the Governor's Proclamation of Tubman Day. This event will include the unveiling of a new Maryland-Delaware driving guide highlighting the Harriet Tubman Underground Railroad Byway. The guide begins at the National Park in Maryland and covers sites of importance to Tubman's early life in slavery. It continues through Delaware along a route that connects the places identified by Tubman as important to her rescue missions. The guide ends by encouraging travelers to follow the story through southeast Pennsylvania to Independence Hall. See page 6

In Philadelphia, the Continental Congress

ordered a survey of the Pennsylvania side of the river, noting places where the enemy might land. This was to extend "down the river as far as Christina Creek." Construction of forts at Billingsport and Red Bank, New Jersey, and Fort Mifflin on Mud Island, and installation of underwater obstacles called chevaux-de-frises, began while Britain's Liverpool and Roebuck continued to patrol.

In April, 1777, the Continental Congress advised Delawareans to prepare for an attack. New Castle's location on the river caused the Delaware Assembly to move inland to Dover. On April 10, British men-of-war appeared in the bay where an encounter took place between the British ships Roebuck and Perseus, and an American ship, Morris. On June 4, Sussex County resident William Adair noted in his diary, "Roebuck blew off her guns in ye road, 2 ships came up the Bay" and again on the 9th, "The ships blew off their guns today." In July Adair added, "Tories have robbed ten cattle in Mr. Kollock's vessel, clothing, houses at Indian River." [11]

On July 21, 1777, two hundred and sixty-one British ships arrived in the Delaware Bay. A British inventory listed "twenty-seven battalions of British and eight of foreigners; one regiment of light dragoons; a detachment of Artillery, consisting of british riflemen, the Queen's rangers and four comp. of Pioneers." [12] Their goal was to capture the rebel capital of Philadelphia. After learning from Roebuck's Capt. Andrew Snape Hammond about the chevaux-de-frises installed below Philadelphia, the ships turned south, rounding the Delmarva Peninsula to head north into the Chesapeake. These ships arrived at Head of Elk on August 25 and proceeded to land British troops.

Almost simultaneously, George Washington led 11,000 American soldiers down Philadelphia Pike into Wilmington. Washington wrote to John Hancock and William Livingston from Quaker Hill, "How far the Enemy have it in view to extend themselves in a Line from Bay to Bay, I cannot determine; but the idea has taken pace with many ... It is another Effort to seduce the people to give up their rights and to encourage our soldiery to desert." [13]

Following the Battle of Brandywine on September 11, British Gen. William Howe dispatched the 71st Regiment (Frazer's Highlanders) and some Hessians under the command of Col. Johann von Loos down Concord Pike into Wilmington. Howe's purpose was to use Wilmington as a point of rendezvous with the British fleet. On October 5, news came from Lewes that "36 sail of the enemy ships went past this town up the Bay, and this evening 47 more were seen from the Light house standing in for the Cape, they have anchored in our road." On October 23, the British ship Augusta caught fire near Fort Mifflin and exploded, the blast causing bottles to rattle in Wilmington.

The winter of Valley Forge followed. Under Brig. Gen. William Smallwood's command, Delaware and Maryland soldiers garrisoned Wilmington, serving as a buffer between the American supply depots at Head of Elk and the British in Philadelphia.
