Funding approved for long-awaited pathway

WILMAPCO (The Wilmington Area Planning Council), voted to approve an updated Transportation Improvement Program that includes funding to finally – finally – complete this long-awaited project.

The Wilmington – New Castle Greenway will be something else entirely, a ribbon of asphalt goodness using an independent right-of-way that used to belong to the Penn Central Railroad. Finishing this greenway will increase safety for walkers and cyclists and boost tourism, economic activity and outdoor recreation. The Wilmington Riverfront and Market street, with its many businesses, restaurants, residences, train station, movie theater, minor league baseball stadium and art scene will suddenly be safely and easily accessible for bicycle commuters and visitors from the suburban communities to the south of Wilmington and from New Castle. Going in the other direction, the historic colonial capitol of Delaware, now the headquarters of Delaware's only national monument, would become similarly accessible to travelers from Wilmington.

Congratulations to WILMAPCO, to DelDOT and Governor Markell for their leadership. And congratulations especially to Delaware Greenways who invented this project back in the 1990s and whose leadership in the intervening years has kept it alive until yesterday's victory became possible

This author talk by Professor Margaret Mulrooney will tell the story of the thousands of Irish immigrants and their descendants who lived and worked along the banks of the Brandywine Creek, many employed at the DuPont Company's Hagley powder yards just north of Wilmington, Delaware. There, in the shadow of the powder mills, they built a vibrant, close-knit community that differed in important ways from popular portrayals of the Irish experience in America.

"To May Market, To May Market"

It happens the first weekend of every May, As the birds chirp in song and the cold blows away. In the town square appear blue and yellow-striped tents, Ready for the May Market, a blooming event.

On display for two days are a variety of lures, Native flowers and plants, from our gardens to yours. There are herbs and handcrafts, baked goods and books, This-and-that for your home, for those hard-to-fill nooks.

Buy a ticket in our raffle at the market entrance, To win a lovely painting or quilt – it takes just one chance. The market is our way of welcoming the new growing season, But behind it also lays a much more important reason.

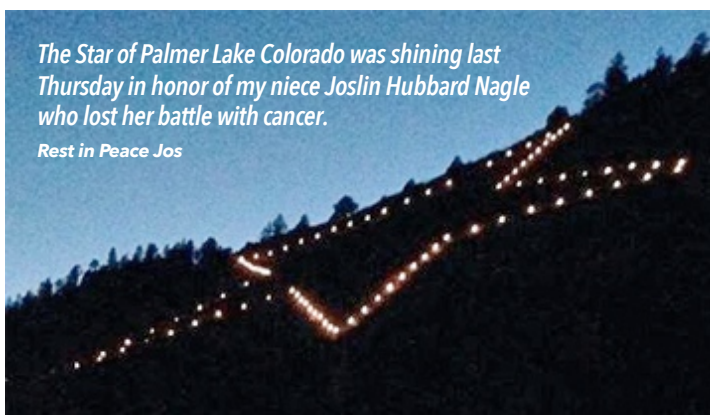

You see, it takes place in New Castle, the heart of Delaware's storied past, And we care for the historic gardens so we ensure that they last. When you purchase a unique flower or pick up a vintage shrub, You will know you are supporting the Arasapha Garden Club. So bring your friends, kids and siblings, your moms, dads and in-laws, To enjoy the May Market and aid a good cause.
