92nd Day in Old New Castle

The rain came and Saturday wasn't the picture perfect day we expected to welcome and entertain visitors. Let's hope the 93rd DIONC is what we envision. Kudos to the committee of ladies and gents that gave countless hours during many meetings to organize the event, to the residents who graciously opened their homes and gardens, and the City departments for their assistance!

this week in HISTORY

Hi everyone my name is Bertha

My name is Bertha! I am pretty much a kitty model and am so photogenic - if I do say so myself! I enjoy playing kitty games, but I find that my all-time favorite activity to do is take some cat naps and sun bathe until the cows come home. My pals here describe me as being a really lovable, si and cuddly young lady. What can I say? Cuddling goes hand in hand with my naps! Come meet me in person, I would love to meet you and finally have a place to call home!

Now that grillin' season is here let's start with trubue American condiments! Here's some mustard facts, tips and one to mix up in your kitchen!

"There is something about mustard that inspires zaniness, a sort of goofy pursuit of a mustard obsession," writes Michele Anna Jordan in the revised 2015 edition of "The Good Cook's Book Of Mustard."

Is there a mustard museum? Yes, at the National Mustard Museum in Middleton, Wisconsin, maned by Barry Levenson who maintains a collection of more than 5,800 mustards.

Mustard's variety is staggering, but it all comes down to one plant in the Brassica family and three—but really only two—types of seeds it produces: white, also referred to as yellow because it's light yellow in color; brown, and black.

The majority of commercial mustard is made with white or brown mustard seeds, or a mix of the two.

Dry mustard or mustard flour is the dried seeds ground to a fine powder. It's in the spice section of the store and is the basis of other styles of prepared mustard.

Brown seeds carry more pronounced heat than white. The addition of other ingredients—wine or beer instead of vinegar, spices, herbs and so on—and the degree to which the seeds are milled give prepared mustard its personality & flavor.

WHAT'S YOUR STYLE?

Yellow or American ballpark. The classic hot dog condiment gets its bright hue from turmeric, not from the ground white seeds from which it's made. It's acidic but not spicy hot.

Related ImageDijon. A silky smooth mustard made with brown seeds, synonymous with the French town where it originated and that Grey Poupon commercial. Dijon made in Dijon, France must adhere to strict standards as defined by the government like true Champagne, but no such U.S. standards exist. What's sold here as "Dijon-style" mustard is a lot more toned down than the original.

Deli or American brown. This deli staple made from brown seeds is mildly spicy and not as tart as yellow mustard.

Chinese. Hot dry mustard (ground from brown seeds) mixed with water, it packs a serious punch. The mustard that comes with your egg rolls at a Chinese restaurant or in the takeout bag is in this category.

English. Colman's is the iconic brand of this mustard made from white and brown seeds. It's most often seen in powdered form, though it's sold in jars too.

German. These mustards range in flavor, texture and heat but the two most popular styles, both made primarily with the brown seed, are hot and smooth.

Whole- or coarse-grain. What whole-wheat bread is to white bread, this mustard is made from a mix of whole and ground seeds, usually the brown kind.

Flower Market Mustard

1/2 cup Coleman's dry Mustard
1 cup sugar • 1 cup white vinegar
1 teaspoon salt • 2 beaten eggs

Let the mustard and vinegar stand in a double-boiler top overnight. Add the sugar, salt and eggs and cook in the double boiler, stirring constantly until thick. Keep in the refrigerator.

Makes about 2 cups.

Do not double.

SPICED POM

PATIO PERFECT

1 1/2 oz vodka
1 oz pomegranate juice
1/2 oz lime juice
1/2 oz vanilla cardamom syrup
dash of Fee Brothers Whiskey Barrel-Aged Bitters sprig of mint and pomegranate seeds for garnish

update

Many have expressed sadness of this deplorable act of vandalism recently reported in these pages.

Here's what I've learned about the trees at the Dobbinsville MSC Substation.

Tree Tech Consultants evaluated the trees and they agreed that the damage was terminal to six, and the removal/replacement value is $1,000.00 per tree.

The three damaged trees will probably be ok. The City and Police continue the investigation.
