Separation Day
for all Delaware in Historic New Castle

Grand Marshall

MICHAEL N. CASTLE

The Honorable Michael N. Castle 2015 Separation Day Grand Marshall

Mike loves his Delaware heritage and has served it well. Delaware's former two-term Governor, nine-term US Congressman, Lieutenant Governor, Deputy Attorney General and State Senator. He was recruited to run for Lt. Gov. of by Gov. Pete du Pont and Gov. of Delaware from 1985 to 1992. In 1992, Then "the Swap," Castle ran for the seat of US Rep. Tom Carper and Carper ran for Governor. Delaware's political leadership had quietly worked out the arrangement and retained the services of two very popular office holders. Castle was first elected US Representative in 1992, defeating former Lt. Gov. Woo and went on to win elections by wide margins eight times.

He has received more love and respect in his post-political life than in all his decades in elected office. He has been saluted at numerous public and private functions since leaving office.

GET GRILLIN' ribeye

► Not all rib steaks are created equal; pay less attention to whether the meat is dry aged, organic, or marked "prime" than to the telltale white-on-red pattern of its intramuscular fat. Visually speaking, multitudinous little streams and rivulets are better than thick rivers; the best meat has an almost snowflake-like intricacy to its marbling.

► Even within a beef rib primal, not all the steaks are created equal. Ask for ribs five and six, the ones closest to the shoulder. They have the biggest "cap" muscle, the delicious crescent of tender, rich beef that crowns the steak.

► The bone is good. Don't cut off the bone. It keeps the meat from overcooking. Also it is good to gnaw on, or for a dog to gnaw on.

► It goes without saying that all beef should be liberally salted before grilling, but it has to be kosher salt. You can't cheat and use table salt (which will melt and mummify your steak) or sea salt (whose crunchy kernels are hard and gnarly.)

► Rib steaks should be thick enough to sear without cooking through, but not so thick that you are essentially grilling a roast beef. The ideal rib steak is about as thick as a bar of soap.

► Cook hot, over live coals, and mostly on one side. There is a school of thought that says you should be constantly flipping it. I don't belong to that school. Sear it up until it's very crusty and brown and beautiful, and then turn it over long enough for it to start cooking, about two or three minutes. Then move it over to the cold side and close the top for a couple of minutes.

► When it's done, let it sit (tent), and when you are ready to serve it, separate the cap. It's only connected by a now-melted fat seam, so you can do it with a spoon. Seriously. Serve it separately than the eye.

Have somebody bring a salad and somebody else bring beer.

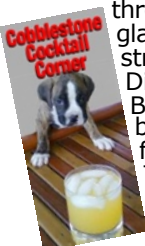

You are now good to go. Summer has arrived.

HOT BLOODED

Jalapeño, Blood Orange & Whiskey

1 cup fresh squeezed blood orange juice - 2 tbs Agave - 1/2 cup whiskey - 1 medium sized jalapeño, chopped, stem removed (about 2 tbs)

In a cocktail shaker, add the blood orange juice, agave and whiskey, stir until combined. Add the jalapeños, replace the shaker cap and shake three times, immediately pour through a strainer into highball glasses filled with ice, straining out the jalapeños. Discard the jalapeños. Blood oranges, by far the best choice may be hard to find. Suggested is Tropicana Trop50 Red Orange, not standard OJ.

BLOCK GARDENS

Most folks think cinder blocks can only be used for just one purpose, but your creativity can prove otherwise. You can even mix and match or modify any of them to fit your own personal needs and tastes.

Perhaps using Legos as a model? It's also a great summer or weekend project with family or friends.
