H.A.C. approves proposed parking lot.

Following many thoughtful protests, the Historic Area Commission granted approval for the Trustees owned "Bowling Alley" open space on West 3rd Street to be paved for parking, by a 3-2 vote. The 39 space parking lot changed from asphalt to concrete, with little thought given to pedestrians (for a walkway through or adjacent) or residential safety. Nearby residents recounted incidences of having vehicles "side-swiped" and daily finds of park visitors' trash. Now it's on to the Board of Adjustment.

LOBSTER DAY!

Tuesday is Lobster Day and who doesn't love lobster? Enjoy one of the most delicious creatures from the sea! There's Bisque, Rolls, Broiled, Lobster Corn Chowder, Ravioli, Rolls, Tail, and with Clarified Butter.

Today we presenting the basic boiled lobster

gonna need

2 or 3 tablespoons salt

4 live lobsters (about 1 1/2 pounds each)

1/2 cup (1 stick) melted butter - Lemon wedges

easy steps partner!

- Fill a large stockpot about half full of water. Add the salt and bring to a boil. When the water has come to a rolling boil, plunge the lobsters headfirst into the pot. Clamp the lid back on tightly and return the water to a boil over high heat. Reduce the heat to medium and cook the lobsters for 12 to 18 minutes (hard-shell lobsters will take the longer time), until the shells turn bright red and the tail meat is firm and opaque when checked.

- Lift the lobsters out of the water with tongs and drain in a colander. Place underside up on a work surface and, grasping firmly, split the tails lengthwise with a large knife. Drain off the excess liquid. Serve with melted butter and lemon wedges.

Sunday Funday Brunch Punch

Gonna need

Ice - 2 liter sprite - 2 c. orange juice

2 c. pineapple juice - 2 c. vodka

1 bottle prosecco - 2 c.

strawberries, sliced - 2 c.

Raspberries - 1 c. Fresh mint leaves, plus more for garnish

Sanding sugars, for rims

Makn' some

1. To a large punch bowl, add ice, Sprite, orange juice, pineapple juice, vodka, Prosecco, strawberries, raspberries and mint leaves and stir to combine.

2. In a small dish of sanding sugar, rim glasses with fresh strawberry and coat rims with sugar. Ladle punch into glasses and garnish with more mint.

Blue Belt

Brian Whitaker,

New Castle's City Clerk, was promoted to the rank of Blue Belt at Elevated Studios located in Trolley Square. He started JiuJitsu almost three years ago and he found the studio and their leadership to be welcoming and the martial art to be challenging, but also rewarding. He wrestled for William Penn High School, went to the varsity training camps, and received a varsity jacket, also letter. He has learned combatives in the Army as a part of his training, and five years after the fact from my departure from the Army his best friend introduced me to this outstanding martial art. Elevated Studios does the Brazilian form of JiuJitsu. This martial art has a lot of therapeutic properties and it is excellent for fitness. He encourages New Castle City residents to give it a try by calling Stephen Plyler at (302) 407-3229.

As crab season peaks, it's time to revisit the remarkable life of Gustav Brunn.

Born in 1893 in southern Germany, Brunn worked in Europe as a spice merchant, selling seasoning to sausage makers, according to historian Deborah Weiner. She wrote about Brunn in a book she co-authored, "On Middle Ground: A History of the Jews in Baltimore."

After the rise of the Nazis, Brunn was sent to Buchenwald concentration camp. He was released after two weeks, and, in 1938, fled to Baltimore with his wife.

With the encouragement of his friends in the Jewish community here, Brunn started his own spice company, capitalizing on his ability to speak German at a time when many German-speaking immigrants lived here. He used a spice grinding machine brought with him from Europe, said Weiner.

Across the street from his downtown spice shop was the wholesale fish market. Seafood purveyors were some of Brunn's best customers.

"The people who sold crabs and shrimp, they made up their own spice blends," said Weiner. Brunn "thought he could do a better blend than the seafood purveyors themselves were coming up with," said Weiner.

Brunn tweaked the basic recipe that many sellers already used. An antique bottle on display at the Baltimore Museum of Industry lists the ingredients: They include laurel leaves, mustard, salt, pepper, cardamom, cloves, paprika and ginger.

The concoction was called "Delicious brand shrimp and crab seasoning."

A friend from the Jewish community worked in advertising and suggested something catchier. They used the name of a local steamship line: Old Bay.

At first, Brunn recounted in an oral history, area seafood merchants were reluctant to try the new spice blend, sure that their own was the best. But one day, he convinced a seafood wholesaler on Water Street to take a sample.

"And this man's business increased with it," Brunn told the interviewer in 1980. "You see, they liked it, when he sold his crabs, they liked it a whole lot better than the others ... so I got one customer after another. And these seafood men here in the city and in the whole area must have it today."
