Puff Pastry Apple Pie

Lady Armstrong tells of how a family friend came over for lunch one day and marveled at the apple pie her mother had made. When his hatter asserted that it must have been the apples he grew that made the pie taste so good, the friend said, "you tell him pastry like that doesn't grow on trees." Since puff pastry can be tricky to prepare, this recipe uses a high-quality, store-bought puff pastry.

on the counter

3 pounds Granny Smith apples—peeled, cored and sliced into 1/4-inch wedges • 1/2 c. granulated sugar • 3 tbsp all-purpose flour, plus more for dusting • Two 14-ounce packages all-butter puff pastry, chilled

let's make pie

- In a large bowl, toss the apples with the sugar and the 3 tsp of flour.
- On a lightly floured work surface, roll out each piece of puff pastry to a 14-inch square. Ease one pastry square into a 9 1/2-inch deep glass pie plate. Scrape the apples and their juices into the shell. Lay the second layer of puff pastry on top. Press the edges together to seal and trim the overhang to 1 inch. Crimp the edge decoratively and cut a few slits on top for venting. Freeze the pie for 1 hour.
- Oven happy at 400°. Place the apple pie on a baking sheet and transfer it to the oven. Bake for 30 minutes, until the crust is lightly golden. Reduce the oven temperature to 375° and bake for 40 minutes longer, until the top is deep golden brown. Transfer the pie to a wire rack to cool slightly before serving. Oh, gonna need vanilla ice cream too!

GLOWING JEKYLL & GIN

This twist on a Gin Daisy looks coral in daylight—and glows white under a black light.

3 oz. Gin
1/2 oz. lemon juice
1 tsp. grenadine
1 handful ice
tonic water

Mix gin, lemon juice and grenadine in a cocktail shaker; pour into a large glass filled with ice. Top with tonic water. Garnish with a glow stick (optional).
