Memorial Day

occurs on the last Monday of May each year in honor of U.S. military personnel who have died during military service. The day, originally Decoration Day, first took place in Charleston after the Civil War in 1865 when freed slaves created a cemetery as a way to remember fallen Union soldiers. It wasn't until after World War I that the federal holiday honored all fallen military personnel for any war. The name Memorial Day began being used in 1882, however the holiday name wasn't officially changed until 1967. Because of its origination, many states in the South at first rejected Decoration Day and wouldn't recognize it. However, slowly the holiday was accepted by every state and remains so today. It is tradition to mark the holiday by flying the national flag at half mast and numerous memorial ceremonies held throughout the U.S. Another Memorial Day tradition since 1911 has been the Indianapolis 500; celebrating its centennial this year! Indy 100

The fact that you're reading this is a good thing; because we're all still here. You see, the world was supposed to end, sucked into a worm hole or something, about 12 hours ago. Around happy hour.

I wasn't really aware of this final deadline until I saw a full page ad in USA Today last Wednesday. Fair warning I thought. Just think, no call ahead seating, skip the bills, only hours to splurge. Psst...enjoy it!

Then I picked up the Wall Street Journal. They reported that 550 doctors and health care professionals, (food police from southern California possibly) want McDonald's to tell Ronald, YOUR FIRED! They're unhappy about Happy Meals and salt. But fear not "comfortable Cobblestones", the matter of Ronald will be voted on by the (un)Happy Stockholders at McDonald's annual meeting...next Thursday! And the world will be happy to hear the news on Friday.

So the world will keep spinning and birds keep singing until the Mayan's surface in November 2012.
