A BIT OF DELAWARE HISTORY

The land that would known as Delaware was governed by the Dutch, Swedes and English from 1631 until it was given to William Penn in 1682. Penn needed the land along the lower Delaware River to give his colony of Pennsylvania access to the Atlantic Ocean. Called the Three Lower Counties by Penn, they were governed, along with Pennsylvania, under charters from King Charles II and his brother James, the Duke of York.

In 1701, after years of dissatisfaction under Penn's rule, the residents of the Three Lower Counties petitioned for their right to have a separate government, which was granted in 1704, with the provision that Penn, or his successors, would continue serving as governor of both regions. That connection became weaker and weaker over time. By 1774, as problems increased between England and her American Colonies, the various Colonial governments, including that of the Three a play written by one of the museum's historic site interpreters, Brian Cannon, commemorating the June 15, 1776 separation of the Three Lower Counties from Great Britain and Pennsylvania to form the Delaware State.

Set in the very room where events depicted in the play took place 235 years ago. Sunday, June 5, at 1 and 3 p.m.; and on Saturday, June 11, at 2:30 p.m. at the New Castle Court House Museum, 211 Delaware St. in New Castle.

Lower Counties, began to communicate more closely with each other. In September 1774, after England closed the port of Boston, the First Continental Congress, composed of representatives from all the Colonies, was called to try to find ways to work with the king, but increasingly found little to no cooperation.

On May 15, 1776, the Second Continental Congress, anticipated the possibility of a break with England and advised each of the 13 Colonies to have a government in place, ready to run their affairs should it become necessary. On June 15, the Assembly of the Three Lower Counties meeting in the Assembly Room in the New Castle Court House, acted on the advice of Congress, approving a Separation Resolution. Under this document, anyone holding office, military or civilian, in the colony would thereafter be doing so in the name of the government of the Counties of New Castle, Kent and Sussex Upon Delaware, and not the King of England. This cut all ties that Delaware had with the British crown, and William Penn's claim.

Heirloom of the Week

Sanguine Ameliore Lettuce

This unique 19th century French heirloom was introduced to America by C.C. Morse in 1906 under the name "Strawberry Cabbage Lettuce." The small cabbage or butterhead type plants are quite charming, with green leaves being splashed in scarlet-red as if a red rain fell upon them, glistening and beautiful. Leaves are tender, mild and of a high quality; yummy!
